The newsletter of aQuiver

aQuiver celebrates 10 + 5 years

If you were to ask an economist, he would say "These are difficult times". Of course, that's what economists always say. The times may be difficult indeed but they are most certainly interesting as well. 2021 will hopefully be the beginning of the end of an unprecedented crisis that has thrown mankind into medical, social and economic dismay.

In the absence of a better euphemism, 2020 has been a challenging year that few, if any, will miss. 2021 brings along, not only the renewed hope for the end of the pandemic, but an anniversary for aQuiver as well. This year, we celebrate 10 + 5 years of existence, dedication and service. Time flies...

That being said, and in the context of the current situation, we look forward with both confidence and humility to amplifying our future; both in terms of quality and magnitude. Our promise to you is to do so whilst remaining true to our principles, the foundation on how our relationship is firmly based on.

Some of you have been with us from the very beginning. With others we started working on the way. There are even some with whom we have parted ways. To all of you, we are thankful for bringing us where we are today. And to mark this milestone, we have once more displaced ourselves from our comfort zone with a thorough rebranding.

This rebranding starts with a fresh logo, results in an upgraded website and culminates in a relocation to our new premises. Our proprietary, purpose-built offices will reflect both our business ethos and our vision, attesting to our continuous commitment to focus and quality. We very much look forward to welcoming you there.

Best wishes for the new year and, above all, good health.

Pericles
